This week we walk with Jesus to his cross – and he walks with us through ours. We walk with him through exuberant celebration to soul crushing death. He walks with us through dashed hopes and betrayals to abandonment. We know he rises again but, for this week, we are in the moment and in grief. He knows his resurrection is ours, yet, in this moment, he shares in the deepest wounds of our souls.

In the kingdom, there is no hierarchy of suffering. God does not call on us to forget our pains because the pain of his Son is so much greater. Jesus does not say to us, "You think you have it bad? Look at what I had to go through!" The Godhead is not in competition with us and has no desire to out-do anybody when it comes to suffering. When Jesus knew what he was going to be going through, do you know what he prayed? He prayed, "I pray they will all be one, Father, just as you are in me and I am in you. May they also be in us so that the world may believe that you have sent me." Within that prayer is Christ's desire to be one with our suffering and for us to be one with his and with each other's. Within his prayer is the fountainhead of compassion: the whole oneness of 'suffering with'.

Don't try to forget your suffering this week as if it is insignificant in the face of Christ's agony. It absolutely is significant and is all part of his agony, just as his agony is woven into the threads of our grief. His prayer was that we would be one with him and he would be one with us and nothing is left out of that oneness. It was not an airy-fairy prayer; it was a prayer for the mud, blood, and guts of our journeys. Oneness with him and each other is the only way we can survive all our Holy Weeks.

Take a deep breath.

Now begin walking as one.
