Kingdoms and Cities That Shine

By Jean Allen

As I said last week in the reflection on the Beatitudes, we have difficulty incorporating them into our lives in a way that will make the world sit up and take notice. As Jesus indicates this week, when you inhabit the kingdom of Me, you are like salt that has lost its taste or light that is hidden under a basket – no good to anyone really. Have you ever tasted bread that someone forgot to add salt to? So unimpressive and very blah. As I write this, we are experiencing an atmospheric river and, if there are no lights on in our home, it is so dark and depressing.

Jesus speaking of us being the salt of the earth and lights of the world comes directly after his discourse on the beatitudes. He is saying that if we don't seriously try to live with and like the Trinity, who embody the beatitudes, our lives will be flat and dark – not an inspiration to anybody. You may be very active in your parish and engage in lovely devotions, but if you never wrestle with the beatitudes, especially when you're angry and reactive, they are the last thing your ego thinks are necessary. They hardly even come to mind unless they're in the Gospel for a Sunday.

Mention Christianity and the world yawns or angrily reacts. That's not the fault of the world. Christians just haven't given it a consistent light to be drawn to nor have we indicated that we have a flavoring that will brighten the hearts of those who taste. People who say they have rejected Jesus have never met him. They have met distorted representations of him from Christians who have never bought into the Beatitudes, Christians who have more of a relationship with their opinions than with mercy and love. In other words, Christians who live in the kingdom of Me.

Let us build the city of God on a mountain top. Not the city of Me.

That is one dark and depressing city.

St. Scholastica

10 February

Born in 480 of wealthy parents, Scholastica and Benedict were brought up together until he left central Italy for Rome to continue his studies. Twins often share the same interests and ideas with an equal intensity, therefore, it is no surprise that Scholastica and her twin brother, Benedict, established religious communities within a few miles from each other.

Little is known of Scholastica's early life. She founded a religious community for women near Monte Cassino at Plombariola, five miles from where her brother governed a monastery.

The twins visited each other once a year in a farmhouse because Scholastica was not permitted inside the monastery. They spent these times discussing spiritual matters.

According to the "Dialogues of St. Gregory the Great", the brother and sister spent their last day together in prayer and conversation. Scholastica sensed her death was close at hand and she begged Benedict to stay with her until the next day.

He refused her request because he did not want to spend a night outside the monastery, thus breaking his own Rule. Scholastica asked God to let her brother remain and a severe thunderstorm broke out, preventing Benedict and his monks from returning to the abbey.

Benedict cried out, "God forgive you, Sister. What have you done?" Scholastica replied, "I asked a favor of you and you refused. I asked it of God and he granted it."

Brother and sister parted the next morning after their long discussion. Three days later, Benedict was praying in his monastery and saw the soul of his sister rising heavenward in the form of a white dove. Benedict then announced the death of his sister to the monks and later buried her in the tomb he had prepared for himself.
